INVESTIGATE FIRE THAT KILLED ELEVE

Newark, N. J., Sept. 18.—An investigation was started today to fix responsibility for the fire in the plant of the American Button Company.

We declare it to be our unqualified determination to do all in our power to assist the plied leaders in marshaling all available resources to defend that the central powers shall be driven from the soil of the nation which they have invaded.

The Times says: "America's master stroke" were of diplomatic substance. The move is exactly what it ought to be and what, without doubt, the answer of the eastern powers will be. "Now if we want to widen the breach in the ranks of the enemy, the

does stop itching
and relieve eczema

Many sufferers from eczema or similar skin troubles have found Resinol Ointment invaluable in stopping the itching, in soothing and cooling the irritated skin, and in most cases, clearing the trouble away.

Its gentle, harmless ingredients make it safe for use on the tenderest skin, and it is so nearly flesh colored that it may be used without hesitation on exposed surfaces.

DITTRICHSTEIN AS MATINEE IDOL

By FRED J. McISAAC.

Leo Dittrichstein, who is appearing at the Tremont Theatre in "The Matinee Idol,"

is a three-act play by the star in collaboration with A. E. Thomas. It is being performed at the Tremont Theatre, which saw his extraordinarily brilliant performance as a theatrical monarch in "The King."

Dittrichstein has always worn the veil of romance in the past. He played magnificent personages, a master pianist in "The Concert," a celebrated opera singer in "The Great Lover," a group of splendid figures in "The Phantom Bird," and a king, no less, in his last play.

All of these fine roles were foreign in their aims, their graces and their speech. One thing they had in common was a nondescript but picturesque accent, and Dittrichstein could play them better than anybody on the American stage because he was born in Europe himself.

"The Matinee Hero" is American. He was discovered in Cedar Rapids playing stock. Judging by the lines he was a sort of Junior J. Hackett and John Drew rolled into one.

Dittrichstein himself is a clever and experienced player. As a stage-wright he probably would have protested vigorously against the suggestion of Dittrichstein, the actor, to play the lead in the play if they were not the same person. He simply isn't the physical type.

His English is good enough even when he gets excited, but his intonation is still alien, and his gestures, his expressions, his poses are unlike any famous matinee idol I ever saw. Nevertheless Dittrichstein has personality, an unwavering ability to construct a sweet and wholesome personality before your eyes, and after the first few minutes you forget that such an individual never could have come from Cedar Rapids.

The play itself is an intimate affair, an actor in the bosom of his family with one or two intruders. To those who take more than a passing interest in the drama it is a real gem.

This matinee idol is managed by a practical, but loving wife. She removes all responsibility from him, she thinks for him, cuddles him and smoothes him.

For years he has been making money playing "mush." His ambition is to play "Hamlet."

A very unusual sort of adventures gets her clutches upon this simple Theophrastus. She encourages his ambition, and he embarks with her and a stupendous production of Shakespeare's masterpiece, heretofore his manager, his friends predict utter failure; she alone promises success. And then he discovers that she also is an actress, a mercenary opportunist with a black past.

He turns again to his wife in the play, which is well played and affecting up to the final scene, when he climbs upon his wife's lap and lays his head upon her bosom, a reversal of the usual order, which brings titters from unkind folk in the audience.

And then the adventures, exposed and humiliated, assures him that he has not lost to him about his gift for Shakespeare, and he confounds his skeptical wife and manager by a very dramatic recital of the soliloquy. The curtain falls with the assurance that a new Hamlet is to be introduced to the American public.

The work of Margaret Reid in the dramatic and difficult role of the trading woman deserves great commendation. It was a consistent and not wholly unsympathetic character which she created. Catherine Proctor was very effective as the prosaic but affectionate spouse of the great man, and Cora Witherspoon did well with her few minutes as a lady interviewer.

Lester Chamberlain, as a commiserator.

CLOTHING FOR BELGIANS! LET ALL HELP!

Once more in America hearing the call of "your Belgians" across the miles of women, and once more through the American Red Cross, America is preparing to go in to the aid of the stricken little country now starving and destitute, struggling for existence.

For this purpose, the American Red Cross is organizing a drive for 3,000 tons of clothing, to be sent between September 27 and September 30. This is being done in cooperation with and at the request of Herbert Hoover and the Food Administration.

Belgium's share of this amount is 400 tons. Germany has requisitioned all the clothing, the underwear, linens, hosiery, curtains, blankets and carpets in all the shops throughout Belgium.
